

Allowing the use of cellular telephones after the plane leave the gate is a big mistake. The noise level will be unbearable at times and cause for problems.

The use of cellular phones for other than vocal use should be allowed if it is not a safety issue. Let individuals use their phones to send text messages or surf the internet because this use will not interfere with other individuals personal space.

Get on a public train that allow the use of cell phones and you will hear the noise but you can go to another car on that train to escape the noise. However on a plane you can not get on another plane to escape the noise.
